

CODE: THO 6382	TITLE: Foundational Texts in Eastern Christian Theology
CREDITS: 3 cr.
TERM: Fall 2012	PROFESSOR: Andriy Chirovsky

DESCRIPTION	A study of prominent texts in the doctrinal literature of the Eastern Churches throughout the ages, including selected writings of Irenaeus of Lyons, Origen, Athanasius, Basil, Gregory of Nazianzus, Ps.-Dionysius, Maximus, John Damascene, Photius, Gregory Palamas, Peter Mohyla, John Zizioulas.
OBJECTIVES	An appreciation of the antinomic and apophatic tradition of theologizing in the Eastern Churches. Identification of classic authors and texts and examination of dominant themes at some depth. Exposure of students to various types of texts: orations, treatises, centuries, sermons, etc., and various contexts: exposition, controversy, catechesis, etc. Application of insights gleaned to a preachable and teachable, balanced theology for the contemporary Christian.
WORKLOAD	Weekly class presentations and in-depth group discussions regarding the readings. These crucially important presentations and discussions will focus on situating the selected classic texts within the wider Tradition. One student will present each text. All others will engage in a discussion focusing on questions internal to the text, and those that connect to contemporary concerns. Weekly postings to class website, research paper (12-15 typed pages) or other negotiated project. Oral Exam.
